Grammar with positive statement examples: I play, you play, play, we play, they play short forms: I play, you play, you play, we play, we play, they play negative statement: I don't sit, you don't sit, you don't sit (you don't...), he's not sitting (he's not...), questions: Am I eating? Are you eating? Does he eat? Negative questions: Am I not watching? Don't you watch? Isn't he watching? Short forms: Don't you see? Isn't he watching? Negative questions usually express surprise. Isn't it working? Use 1. We use the current constant tension to say that something happens at the time of speech. We are often used with time expressions like now or for now. Examples: I'm doing housework right now. You're not listening to the right now. What is he doing? 2. Uses for correct temporary activities now, but not necessarily to occur speech time. Time expressions like today, this week or these days are typical of this use. Examples: I'm in London. I'm learning English here. She can't go out today. We use the constant present for planned future arrangements. The time to work must be given in the sentence (soon, tomorrow, Monday, next week), otherwise it is not clear that we are talking about the future. Examples: I'm coming soon. We're leaving on Monday. With the constant present constant tension expresses the idea that something happens often and that it disturbs the speaker. Examples: I always forget my keys. He always smokes in living room 5. We do not usually use these sets of acts (state actions) in a continuous form: a. Actions of the senses: feeling, hearing, see, smell, taste. On the other hand, see, watch or listen are actions of action and can be used in continuous: I can hear you. I'm listening to you. Are you looking at the bird? b. Acts of liking and coercing: such as, love, hatred, fear, hatred, want, desire... I love animals I hate snakes C acts of mental states: agree, believe, forget, know, remember, suppose, think ... I agree with you. I suppose you're right. D. The actions of the permanent states: they may belong, contain, condemn, possess, possess... This pen to me I have a new pet E. Actions appearance: looks, appear, look, sound... Looks like it's going to rain your new haircut looks really good. If some of these acts are used nowadays constant on stress, they have a different meaning. In such a case, actions become acts. I think he's my best friend (mental state) I'm thinking of giving him a gift (mental actify) has a new bathroom (holder) he bathes (taking a bath) I see what it means (he knows) I meet a doctor I am sick (visit) smells beautiful flowers. It tastes soup if it's warm enough all these materials written for students and teachers of English as a foreign language.
